Job Description

Are you good at your job, but wake up every morning wishing you could work on things that you love? Do those things tend to revolve around music? Do you love going to festivals? Are you a bit of a sneaker head?

If that sounds like you, read on.

Kingdom Collective is a culture agency. It's also a bunch of great people that don't pay lip service to diversity, but live and breathe it with representation at every level and around half of the staff coming from ethnically diverse backgrounds. They aren't hierarchical, believe good ideas can come from anywhere and value people's varied perspectives.

The work they do is great. And it's across some of the coolest brands you could think of. It could involve anything from PR, talent management, marketing, events, branding, advertising or more. Kingdom's team doesn't limit itself, they find whatever is the most authentic solution for their clients, and do that. Want an idea of what that looks like? Check their Instagram for a flavour:

Festivals? Sneaker brands? Drinks brands? The clients are united by a strong desire to add to the communities and culture they want to engage with, rather than hijack it.

They're also growing, with an impressive pipeline of new business and an ever evolving skill set. To really thrive here, you should have an entrepreneurial spirit and really see the business' and your colleagues' success as your own.

So who are they looking for?

Ideally, you will be an organised doer. A leader who takes their team with them. Ambitious, humble and able to take the reins and get hands on when you need to. If you're a great writer, even better. This role will work for someone who is keen to grow and willing to take opportunities with both hands.

Not worked in culture before? No problem. What's more important is a background in a fast paced environment and being that person seen as a trusted pair of hands by your clients. Whether that is corporate communications, consumer goods or anything in-between, if you're the person that keeps your accounts on course, and can both define the processes and make sure people stick to them, all that really matters is that you're interested.

Sounds like you? Get in touch.
